Architect Embarks on Architecture Challenge

Aspen architect Jamie Brewster McLeod of Brewster McLeod Architects Inc. (www.brewstermcLeod.com) has enrolled in the Denver American Institute of Architects' first-ever professional series to educate Colorado architects on the creation of ambitious energy-efficient design.

The goal of the Architecture 2030 Challenge is to reach 60 to 100 percent reduction in fossil fuel greenhouse gas emissions. This challenge will hold Brewster McLeod responsible for super-efficient, next-generation buildings that not only will make McLeod unique in this field, but a true asset in future architecture, the firm said in its news release.
